Mr Luke Shingles

Dear Luke,

Congratulations! I am pleased to acknowledge the receipt of your research thesis for examination. We recognise that this is the culmination of years of hard work and dedication and we hope it has also been a rewarding and enjoyable intellectual and personal experience for you.

As a token of our recognition for your achievement in reaching this point, a gift from the Australian National University merchandise range is enclosed. We look forward to being able to welcome you as a member of the Alumni community of this University, at graduation.

We will promptly dispatch your thesis to the approved examiners whom are given a notional two (2) months from receipt of your thesis to complete their reports. Please note: this timeline may vary depending on identification and availability of examiners. The examination process typically takes between three (3) and four (4) months. Although it is a confidential process you are welcome to make contact with the Higher Degrees Examination Officer to check on the progress of your examination at any time.

We recommend that you review the possible results of a thesis examination. It is common for candidates to be asked to make minor amendments and corrections to their thesis by examiners. Please allow for time to make any amendments that may be requested.

Graduation ceremonies are held in July and December each year. Research degrees can be conferred in absentia (without attending a ceremony) but on successful completion of your thesis, we hope you and your guests will be able to join in the celebrations at a ceremony. Our office provides information about graduation closer to the event.

If you need to provide evidence to potential employers or others about your educational status, you are invited to use this letter as evidence of submission of your research thesis.

Yours sincerely,

for Registrar, Student Administration
